 SATURDAY, AUGUST 9, 1884.

It is much to be desired that boards of conciliation should be constituted between steamship owners and steamship hands; but it is not to be denied that boards of conciliation can be of no possible service unless both parties represented by them agree, and more than agree—bind themselves to be bound by their decisions. A board of conciliation should be the way to all the waste and loss, if inseparable from lengthened disputes, and if effective in the administration, should never permit a lock-out or strike. But how is it that attempts at conciliation have been made for many years, and yet the friction between employer and employee, so frequently culminating in the deplorable strike, has not been perceptibly lessened? There are various causes. First, perhaps, the extreme difficulty of the members of the board find in agreeing amongst themselves; secondly, the unwillingness, in some cases the absolute refusal, of the employees to be bound by the decision of the board; and thirdly, the impossibility of bringing the whole of the members of any particular class to a common understanding as to the advisability of agreement and the means by which it might be effected. It may be that the Intercolonial Federation Conference now sitting in Sydney will overcome all these difficulties. If they really desire to do so, there are a few rocks and quicksands which must be carefully avoided, and which it may be well to point out. First, then, it would seem that there should be a common ground of understanding. Both common ground should have a voice in the formation of rules by which both are to be bound. The Bazaar Conference delegates speak of "our" rules by which "you" are to be bound—"not necessarily" as the chairman put it; "we don't dictate to you, but if the man continues in your employment, and does not join the union, our members will have to give you notice." And in similar fashion the screw would be applied in other instances. The one party will have an ironclad agreement by which the other will not be bound, but which, should the other refuse to accept its provisions, will inflict positive loss. Now, is it not absolutely essential to a national and lasting agreement that both parties should have a voice in the making of these rules, by which, despite all sophistry, both must be bound? Is it a fair or a promising way of beginning the work of conciliation to come with a solid mass of matter thoroughly distasteful to one side, and to say, "This must be swallowed as a preliminary"? Would it not be better to go a little further back for a beginning, to deal all through as parties with equal powers and rights?

Further, supposing the conditions of both parties to be so solidly set as not to be broken, the rules of the employees to be accepted without reference to the owners, and the board of conciliation only to be constituted in connection with the necessities of the owners, is there not something to be suggested as to a better formation of such boards than we have hitherto been familiar with? We have seen conferences between owners and workmen before; we have seen conciliation boards formed, and not unfrequently we have seen those boards considering, not the equities of the case, but its class bearings, the one side advocating the claim of the master, the other that of the workman, and no prospect whatever of a judicial consideration being given to real merits or evident inequalities. The reason was that the members of the board were experts and partisans, chosen for their special knowledge, irrespective of their inseparable prejudices. The suggestion to be made to the conference is, Would not one expert be sufficient for each side, one man well qualified to watch the facts and to understand their inferences on behalf of each party, and should not the other be men of known probity and capacity, but, as far as possible, removed from all connection with the particular business, occupation, or trade?

Then, supposing the board to be perfect after its sort, unprejudiced as capable, of what service could it be if it were of power to give effect to its decrees? This impotence has been felt before, and will be felt again unless disobedience to the decrees incurs pains and penalties; and it is for those electing the board to so bind themselves as to provide penalties which may on occasion be enforced. There would be no difficulty about this if the matter were approached in earnestness and with good intent. Sureties could be given, funds invested by either side, to be forfeited by any refusal to accept a rule, or upon any act of disobedience. But if a willingness is not discovered to provide and submit to such a penalty, surely a lack of earnestness is shown, and the proceedings shrink at once from effective legislation to a simple pourparler, or purposeless debate. It is by no means to be desired that a conference from which so much might be hoped should so miserably dwindle, but it is really difficult to see what else lies before it if the essentials of useful agreement are not deliberately faced. Delegates of either side must rise above the "game of grub" for immediate concessions, must agree to submit their differences to an impartial but competent tribunal, and must bind themselves to abide by the decisions of that tribunal, with no afterthought, or appeal to a popular sense of right, which may possibly be opposed to the recorded judgment.

Five-and-twenty years ago the land policy embodied in the existing land law triumphed throughout the country to the cry of "Down with the squatters." The triumphant conquerors thought that the squatters were down, and the defeated party thought so too. Ever since then, free selection has been going on at a rate, utterly unanticipated by its most enthusiastic supporters; and in early days, at least, we used to be told that every selection represented a happy family of six settled on the soil. The family estimate has somewhat dwindled of late, because we should have to borrow the population of two or three neighbouring colonies to make up the number. The selectors, however, have increased every year. They are now numerous enough to control the elections in several constituencies, and to hold the balance in many more. They have become a great political power, and far outnumber the squatters, which, in a country where universal suffrage obtains, is a matter of capital importance. Yet on the third reading of a new Land Bill, which gives to existing and future selectors larger privileges and better terms than have been obtainable hitherto, the objection is raised that it has been carried by the influence and votes of the squatters. Such a statement naturally gives rise to two questions. The first is, can it possibly be true? and the second is, how can a party so thoroughly crushed a quarter of a century ago be still a dominant political party? Very small minorities, especially when unorganised, do not usually rule a country, and the squatters are very few in number compared with the rest of the population; and as to their disorganisation, the evidence has been seen in the fact that to some extent they voted on opposite sides. If in any way they do work compactly it must be by quiet and unseen methods, for they have neither conferences nor local committees nor special members. The fact that a mere handful of men have controlled Parliament on a measure that has been publicly discussed for months and months, it is a most extraordinary state of things in a country where universal suffrage is backed by nearly equal electoral districts. In the old days, when the colony was emerging from the condition of a Crown colony of a severe type, this was intelligible enough, but that this should be the case after thirty years of self-government and five-and-twenty years of free selection, is, if it is true, most extraordinary. The fact that the pastoral industry is the mainstay of the colony's prosperity is not enough to account for it, because the lessees of pastoral land constitute a small minority. There is not one of them who is not a servant enough in his employment to outvote him half-a-dozen times over. Nor can it be said that the bill has been smuggled through a Parliament elected to deal with different questions, and while the country was asleep. The Parliament was elected for the special purpose of dealing with the land question. Every elector was on the qui vive. Every man who had a selection, or who wanted to get one, knew what he was about, and all the residents in towns knew that the question of Crown rentals and taxation was in the air. Not since Sir John Robertson first went to the country has the question been more deliberately put to the whole population, and yet we are told that a Parliament so chosen has legislated in the interest of a class who do not number one in a thousand. Surely the burden of proof rests on those who put forward so extraordinary a statement.

Some of our correspondents have been discussing lately what ought, or what ought not, to be taught at a university, especially as respects modern languages. Taken by itself, it is hard to say of any study that it is not fit for a university, and if time were unlimited, the range of subjects might be unlimited; but when a specific course has to be marked out as what is necessary as preparation for a degree, it is incumbent to see that the studies are such as shall realise the purpose of University training. The University is the highest school in the country, but it is essentially a school. It is a place for mental discipline, and that purpose must never be lost sight of. The studies must be such as to draw out and to exercise the intellectual faculties, to cultivate the reasoning powers, to quicken and refine the imagination, and to give breadth of view. No mere proficiency in detail will be effective unless the student has also learnt a sympathy with all that is best of what men have thought and said. That cannot be a liberal education which has not liberalised the mind, freed it from prejudices and fetters, and lifted it to a higher plane.

The whole question has been discussed in a lecture delivered at the beginning of this year at the London Institution by Mr. JAMES BRYCE, M.P., and which has been reprinted in the Contemporary Review. He discusses what an ideal university ought to be and to do, and the first demand he makes is that it should be a teaching institution, and he is almost inclined to deny to the London University, which is merely an examining body, its title. It began, however, as a teaching body, University College being the original University of London, and it was only the religious feud that forced it back into the position of a college, and gave the title of University to the central examining board of the affiliated colleges. Practically, the affiliated colleges are so many petty universities without the title and without the efficiency. The same religious difficulty has substituted in Ireland. Royal University for a teaching body. Everything that is taught at a university can no doubt be put into books, and all the best lectures are printed; yet books can never supply the place of living teachers, and none admit more readily than those who have sat at the feet of a real professor. Books are not so flexible as teaching, nor do they quicken the emotions and touch the imagination in the way that an enthusiastic lecturer does.

The second thing that Mr. Bryce demands of a university is that it should teach everything deserving of scientific treatment. "Every branch of knowledge which can be treated in a scientific manner, reduced to order, and expounded as a body of correlated principles, is proper for a university." But then, can all students learn everything? Certainly not. But while the degree course may be specific, there may be any quantity of teaching, and teaching proper to a university, outside the academic routine. "Place guards if you like at the doors of your examination halls, but let your lecture-rooms stand always open like the churches of Catholic Europe, so that thereby even the passing wayfarer may hear the voice, and be drawn in." Such casual students, however, will not ordinarily be degree men. But Mr. Bryce rather blows upon degrees, which he says were originally merely licenses to teach, and were descriptions rather than titles. It is a modification, and to some extent an abuse, of the original idea, that a university is more a degree-conferring than a teaching body.

It seems probable that a mistake has been made in fogging the man who was indicted on conduct at Coogee. The punishment has shocked the public sentiment, because the public, judging by the reports, have been led to regard it as ill-advised and wrong. Such is the general truth; and even when the matter is looked into somewhat more closely, grounds of wrong appear. The spirit of the law appears to have been departed from. It was not contemplated that men should be brought to the triangles for indecency of this sort. With extreme reluctance the fogging clauses were advocated and passed, in the hope that they might be effective in suppressing a certain brutality and vile and wilful obscenity which appeared to be growing in the community. Offences were frequently committed of such manifest brutality that it was felt that nothing less than brute punishment could be adequate for them. We recognised fogging as a cruel and brutal punishment; we proposed to apply it to cruel and brutal offences. It does not appear that ANDERSON'S offence falls under either classification. It was gross, but there is no evidence that it was brutal. It appears to have been destitute of malicious intention to give offence. The case merited a heavy fine, maybe a period of imprisonment, but not the lash. Such an error as this makes cause for much regret; another such, and it might be difficult to obtain public sanction for the fogging of the wretch who committed a brutal offence against woman or child. The fogging provisions are valuable for their special purpose, and the public interest would suffer if an effective reaction against them were provoked by their injudicious application to cases lying outside certain easily distinguishable limits. It is said that this case was of a character to create extreme disgust; but that fact, though enough to warrant the infliction of heavy punishment, was not enough to prove that it belonged to the peculiar class of offences for which the special punishment of fogging is provided. It will afford some satisfaction to the public to learn that the MINISTER FOR JUSTICE has instituted a special inquiry into the case.

Mr. GRIFFITH'S speech upon the second reading of the Queensland Immigration Act Amendment Bill leaves no possibility of doubt as to the thoroughness of his intention to quash the cultivation of sugar by black labour. "He thought that if there was one thing more distinctly un-qualified than another by the people of the colony at the last election, it was that they intended to forego to look to Europe for the labour required for the development of the colony; and consequently, if there was one thing more distinctly intended than another by Mr. GRIFFITH'S bill, it was to exclude Asiatic labour, and to introduce people from Europe. He is justly proud of the bill, and he is justly proud of the fact that Mr. GRIFFITH'S bill has slightly overstepped the "distinct enunciation" of the general election. Mr. BLACK pointed so much out in reply to the Premier, contending that the proposals of the bill would not only be a blow to the sugar industry, but would also be a blow to the whole of the modern districts. "The planters," he said, "would apply for 5000 of these indentured labourers, but whatever rate of wages would be given to them would be the ruling rate of wages in the districts where they would be employed." So much may not be exactly correct, but it is not correct with the sugar industry, but this much appears to all—the competition of thousands of newly-imported labourers from Europe will not be popular with the white workmen already established in the north, and the policy which deliberately plans such a competition is one which should be considered and provided for. Mr. GRIFFITH may probably consider that he has made provision by an arrangement under which the indentured labourers will only displace the blacks already on the plantations. He does not suppose that white labourers will work in the cane fields, but he does consider that it would be a matter for regret if the gang system were discontinued, and a system of individual labour substituted. A system of individual labour is a convenient vague phrase; but it has yet to be shown that any system of white labour will work in the cane fields in the north of the colony. The United voice of the planters now settled there is against white labour of any sort, and their united voice against any politician who would force it upon them, or more correctly, force them to seek it, by stopping the weight of their opposition, when added to that of the working-man's party? His immigration policy will probably offend. It may be, of course, that the working-man's party in Queensland has reached a height of reason and philosophy which is beyond the limits of competition with men of the same stock or colour; but that for the present is purely a speculative matter, a question which a near future may answer, and which may be left to those whom it immediately concerns.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The report that the French had seized Port Kelang as a material guarantee for the payment by China of the demanded indemnity, requires, it seems, confirmation. The British Government have not received any information of the alleged seizure; and so far as the United Kingdom is concerned, the seizure is still being carried on. Active preparations are being made at Canton to meet a possible attack by the French. Regarding the Federation Enabling Bill, there has been a discussion in the House of Commons. Lord Salisbury, though not opposed to the measure, appeared to be being passed without full consideration. Mr. Parnell, signing Mr. Gladstone to proceed with it in the autumn session. The Australians on Thursday commenced a match against a Gloucestershire team. The Englishmen put together 501 for their first innings. The Australians then went in, and had made 11 runs without the loss of a wicket when the stumps were drawn.

The English mail, per R.M.S. Serica, was delivered in Sydney yesterday morning. Our English and foreign correspondence comes down to July 4, and in part of our issue we give our London correspondent's letter and extracts from the papers to the above date.

The Hon. G. R. Dibbs, accompanied by the Hon. E. A. Wright, Dr. Tennant, M.L.A., Dr. Mackellar, and one or two other gentlemen, visited the hospital ship Faraway at the quarantine station yesterday. The work connected with the alterations that have been for some time past in progress on board the vessel is fast approaching completion, and another week, it is believed, will see everything complete.

At the opening of the railway from Armidale to Glen Innes on the 18th instant, the Government was represented by the Acting Minister for Works and Colonial Treasurer (Hon. G. R. Dibbs), the Minister for Mines (Hon. J. P. Abbott), and Postmaster-General (Hon. James Watson). The Royal Commission on the Conservation of Water resumed its sitting yesterday, when the following members were present:—Mr. R. Barton, M.L.A., Mr. J. B. Tonkin, Mr. E. A. Franklin, C.E., Mr. F. G. Gippe, O.E., Mr. W. J. Lyons, M.L.A., Mr. R. L. Murray, M.L.A., Mr. D. McDonald, C.E., and Mr. W. Townsend. The subject of the day was the conservation of water in Victoria, and as to the canalisation of the Darling River.

This recent fogging case, in which a seaman named Anderson received 25 lashes for having committed an offence at Coogee, is being made the subject of a special inquiry by the Minister for Justice (Hon. H. E. Cohen). Mr. Cohen's attention was drawn to the matter last Monday afternoon, and on Tuesday morning he called for the depositions in the case. The depositions reached him at the Legislative Assembly on Tuesday evening, just in time to permit of his making a hasty perusal of them before referring to the case in reply to some remarks which were made by an hon. member concerning it. Without expressing approval of the course the magistrates had taken in ordering the fogging of Anderson, Mr. Cohen pointed out the fact that the depositions were different from those which were stated in the complaint made of the injustice of the sentence passed upon the prisoner. He explained that the provision in the Criminal Law Amendment Act under which fogging was administered, was only intended to apply to wilful, deliberate, and gross offences against public decency, but up to that time he had had no opportunity for making further inquiry into the circumstances of the case. On the following day, however, he directed that the whole matter should be fully investigated, and that investigation is now being made.

In the Court yesterday the most important matter dealt with was an adjourned motion for a writ of certiorari against a magistrate of Milperrah, calling upon him to show cause why the conviction of two men, J. W. and H. W. Keys, one for killing cattle in his possession reasonably supposed to have been stolen, and the other for aiding and abetting, should not be quashed on the grounds that the offence did not come within the meaning of the Act under which they were convicted. It was arranged that the arguments should be taken as upon a motion to make the rule absolute to quash the conviction, and the Court unanimously decided that the convictions were bad and must be quashed. An application for a writ of certiorari was granted, calling upon a magistrate of Milperrah to show cause why an information against certain young men at Bathurst who are charged with having entered a building in which the Salvation Army were holding religious service, and created a disturbance. His Honor the Primary Judge disposed of an application in Lunacy before he proceeded to deal with the general business in Equity. Several matters in the last-named jurisdiction occupied the attention of the Court for a considerable time. The list was subsequently cleared.

Our London correspondent writes on July 4:—"Sir Henry Parkes has left London, and will return to Sydney by way of America. He will prolong his stay in the United States, chiefly at New York, San Francisco, and St. Louis, for eight or ten days. Shortly before leaving London Sir Henry was entertained to dinner at the Garrick Club. He has also been the guest at many private entertainments, in one week visiting Lord Tennyson, and dining with the Right Hon. W. E. Forster, Sir J. Cooper, the Prime Minister, and Mr. T. B. Potter, thereby showing not only his immense popularity amongst certain circles, but also a power of digestion which must be highly satisfactory to one of his years. His friends will be glad to hear that he is in very good health, and that the private business which brought him to England has come to a satisfactory conclusion. Through some ambiguity in our cable message respecting Sir Henry Parkes' return to Sydney, which was published a few days ago, it was made to appear that he left England on the 1st instant. It is evident from the above, that he left San Francisco on the 4th instant."

Yesterday was a return to fine weather, the sun shining out with almost summer heat, and the sky being almost cloudless during the greater part of the day. Some heavy-looking clouds appeared to the southward during the afternoon, but they disappeared after dark, and the night was quite fine.

Among the passengers lately arrived from Brisbane was Monsieur Edmond Cottet, the celebrated French travel agent and geographer, who is now visiting the Australian colonies on a mission from the French Minister of Public Instruction. Monsieur Cottet is one of the few European travellers who have ever performed the overland journey from Paris to Vladivostok, through Europe and Asia, across Siberia. The French traveller has described the most beautiful and agreeable in the world. After visiting China, Tonkin, Cochinchina, and the Kingdom of Cambodia, he returned to France. On his return to Paris Monsieur Cottet published two interesting volumes, in which he gave narratives of his travels. He set out again on another voyage to the Malay Peninsula, and the Malayan Archipelago, and visited Krakatoa, the scene of the recent great volcanic disturbance. He then went to Borneo and the dominions of Rajah Brooke, then to Java and the neighbouring islands, from whence he sailed Australia. He visited the coast of New South Wales, and in the interior, he came on to this colony, and will go hence to Victoria, Tasmania, and New Zealand, returning home via New Caledonia, Tahiti, and California. His mission to these countries is essentially of a geographical and mineral character, and is entirely devoid of political significance. The French Minister of Public Instruction is anxious to obtain about these countries the most reliable information, so as to dispel the ignorance which has so long prevailed with regard to Australia in the minds of Frenchmen, and correct the false views which are taught in French schools about the geography of this part of the world. Monsieur Cottet was introduced yesterday afternoon to the Hon. Alexander Stuart and the Hon. F. A. Wright, by Mr. J. A. Meale, the honorary secretary of the Geographical Society of Australia. The Premier received him with his usual courtesy, and gave him the facilities he gave him for the fulfilment of his mission. During the time he has been in Sydney the celebrated traveller has visited the Museum, the University, and the Prince Alfred Hospital, and expressed himself greatly surprised at the sight of many of the remarkable institutions which he had seen in his travels. He could not help expressing his admiration of the architectural beauty of these monuments, and was especially delighted when, in the company of Professor Stephens, he was shown over the great hall of the University, leaving to-day for a trip in the interior of the country.

On Saturday last Mr. Charles Cowper, the Sheriff, entertained the Colonial Secretary of Hongkong, Mr. Marsh, and Mrs. Marsh, as well as Mr. Ackroyd, the Registrar of the Supreme Court of that colony, who were then on a visit to Sydney, by a trip up the Parramatta River on the Government steam launch Albatross. Among the guests were his Honor the Chief Justice (Sir James Martin), Mr. Justice Windeyer, the Hon. Alexander Stuart and Mrs. Stuart, Mr. Julian E. Salomons, barrister-at-law, and Mr. John Williams, Crown Solicitor. The scenery of the river was much admired, and the party spent a very enjoyable day.

An adjourned meeting of the trustees of the Art Gallery, New South Wales, held yesterday, the following resolution was adopted:—"That out of the funds placed at the disposal of the trustees for the purchase of works of art, the sums of £1250 and £75 may be set apart to be expended in the purchase of an oil painting and water-colour drawing respectively, the trustees submitted the annual financial statement of accounts, which was approved of. A memorandum from the police was read, in reference to the shipping of cattle at Eden, and the information contained relative to the mode of treatment was considered by the committee, and found satisfactory. The following is the summary of the Inspector's report for July (previous to 17th inst.): 17 convictions, 10 cases withdrawn, 1 caution, 00 complaints, 7 cases investigated, 0.

In connection with the confirmation recently held by the Primate at St. Mary's Church of England, Baltimore, a pleasing incident took place on Thursday evening last. Prior to the commencement of the usual weekly service a hymn was sung, and the incense was then used. Mr. W. T. Townsend, the secretary, and Inspector G. Webb, after the formal business had been disposed of, the treasurer submitted the annual financial statement of accounts, which was approved of. A memorandum from the police was read, in reference to the shipping of cattle at Eden, and the information contained relative to the mode of treatment was considered by the committee, and found satisfactory. The following is the summary of the Inspector's report for July (previous to 17th inst.): 17 convictions, 10 cases withdrawn, 1 caution, 00 complaints, 7 cases investigated, 0.

The Glacé says:—"The Lancet energetically demands a Legislative enactment for the suppression of barking and howling dogs, who not only make night hideous with their bayings at the moon and other complaints, but, according to our medical contemporaries, are unfavourably influenced by the noise of the streets, and otherwise the Plimoth mark of his vessel. Captain Lee, inspector for the Marine Board, prosecuted. Defendant pleaded guilty. Mr. Addison, S.M., commented severely on the conduct of the defendant, and informed him that he was liable to a penalty of £100. Defendant promised to be more careful in future, and was fined £5, with professional costs."

attraction. Thirty-five individuals have become members of various churches in Waterloo and Liverpool, through the efforts of the Sydney City Mission. The number of children represented by these persons is in round numbers about 60, most of whom are now attending Sunday school.

The more fully to provide facilities for the public to obtain pure country milk and butter, the Fresh Food and Ice Company have opened a number of gathering places, and have arranged to insure the new movement. The premises comprise a shop and refreshment room, each of which has been tastefully decorated and made attractive by good fittings. In the former chilled cream, milk, butter, ice, and kumkies will be retailed, and in the latter tea and coffee will be dispensed, and a system will be introduced by which each customer will be relieved from the inconvenience of "stops" by being favoured with a separate teapot. In the course of the proceedings some interesting information relative to the supply of ice and milk in the city was given, and it was explained that the object of the company had in view was to make easily attainable to the public the wholesome dairy produce it was possible to secure. It was also explained that to avert the ice famine which had occasionally occurred, the company had constructed plant for producing 15 additional tons of ice a day; that by injecting steam into their cans daily they placed their milk as remote as possible from the suspicion of being infected with noxious germs; that their supply of chilled country milk had increased from 80 to 1200 gallons daily; and that a manufactory had been established at Mittagong, by which 1000 gallons of milk received in the morning might be converted into butter by the afternoon. Mr. G. Withers, M.L.A., proposed "Success to the company in their new undertaking," and the toast was very heartily drunk.

WILLIAM-STREET has been in a sad plight for the last two months, owing chiefly to the work of relaying gas and water mains, fresh kerbing, &c. preparatory to the construction of a new roadway with wooden blocks. People who have been already put to great inconvenience by the impediment to traffic which these works created, and by the bad state of the road generally, were beginning to wonder at the length of time that had been allowed to elapse since the laying down of the footpaths and the commencement of the new roadway, and the commencement of operations for laying down the new roadway, and feared that something had gone wrong with the wooden blocks. The Corporation authorities, however, have given a fresh earnest of their intention to do something more by a notification which appears in the columns of the Advertiser, and the signature of the town clerk, which states that through traffic in William-street, between Bourke-street and Dowling-street, will be stopped on and after Monday, the 11th instant, until further notice. The advertisement does not state the purpose for which the stoppage is to be made, but that it will be a serious inconvenience will not be denied, and it is to be hoped the work of re-forming the street will proceed without delay. There are no streets into which the traffic could conveniently be diverted between Dowling and Victoria streets, and unless access is left to Liverpool-street, which means traffic might reach the city by way of Woolloomoolloo-street, it will have to go by way of Darlinghurst-road and thence by way of Burton or Liverpool streets, regaining William-street by way of Bourke-street.

YESTERDAY, at the Quarter Sessions, John Charles Harkness was convicted of forging and uttering, and sentenced to five years on the road. Mounted Trooper and Charles Brown, who had been placed on their trial last week, and remanded because the jury failed to agree, were again placed in the dock on a charge of assault with intent to rob, and were convicted. They were remanded till Monday morning for sentence. A charge against Frederick Huff, for false pretences in pretending that he had paid up all instalments due to a building society on some cottages he had sold to a Mrs. Mary Turner, his Honor stopped the case during the cross-examination of the prosecutrix, and directed the jury to find a verdict of not guilty, there being no evidence to support the allegations in the indictment, although it was clear that the prosecutrix had been "had." A Frenchman named Bettine was acquitted of attempting to discharge a loaded revolver at one Annie Roche. The prosecutrix, prisoner, and witnesses for the Crown, all French, walked down Bourke-street after the verdict in a most amiable manner.

The first case brought under the City of Sydney Improvement Act for the recovery of fees due to the City Improvement Board, came before Mr. Clarke, S.M., at the Central Police Court yesterday. The defendant in the case was one John Graham, and it appeared that he had had erected an awning in front of premises at the corner of Oxford and Riley streets. The awning was considered objectionable by the City Building Surveyor, who thereupon ordered its removal, but the defendant declined to comply with the order. The matter was, in consequence, referred to the City Improvement Board, with the result that the action of the City Building Surveyor was endorsed. The Board then sent in a claim to the defendant for £4 10s professional costs, incurred by their adjudication in the matter, and it was for the recovery of this amount that the action was brought. Mr. Clarke decided in favour of the board, and ordered the defendant to pay the amount claimed, with costs.

It was reported to the City Coroner yesterday morning that a man named Charles Harrison had died suddenly at the Prince Alfred Hospital. The deceased, who was 50 years of age, was a resident of Edgeley-street, Surry Hills. A letter forwarded by Dr. Jenkins showed that the deceased died from injuries received through a fall whilst working in the mortuary connected with the hospital.

A woman named Rebecca Eugenie Austin, about 34 years of age, and wife of William Austin, a carpenter, residing at Thorn-street, Paddington, died suddenly yesterday morning. It is stated that Austin left his wife in bed at 8 o'clock in the morning, and proceeded to the yard, where he remained for some time attending to some work in connection with his case. When he returned to the house he found his wife dead in bed. The matter was at once reported to the police, and an inquest will probably be held.

DONALD McLELLAN, master of the ketch Maggie Taylor, appeared at the Water Police Court yesterday, charged with starting the centre bar of the lock, otherwise the Plimoth mark of his vessel. Captain Lee, inspector for the Marine Board, prosecuted. Defendant pleaded guilty. Mr. Addison, S.M., commented severely on the conduct of the defendant, and informed him that he was liable to a penalty of £100. Defendant promised to be more careful in future, and was fined £5, with professional costs.

The Glacé says:—"The Lancet energetically demands a Legislative enactment for the suppression of barking and howling dogs, who not only make night hideous with their bayings at the moon and other complaints, but, according to our medical contemporaries, are unfavourably influenced by the noise of the streets, and otherwise the Plimoth mark of his vessel. The news telegraphed from Toulon that Dr. Tronca was successfully employing inhalation of oxygen in cases of cholera, reminds us (the Glacé says) of the various methods which an epidemic brings to light, and of the numerous infallible remedies that are variably introduced. It is perhaps unfortunate that wider experience is not awaited before a new measure is thus ventured, for too often the result issues in a disappointment as keen as the hopes raised have been high. From the City of Sydney, it would appear that the oxygen is employed in the collapse stage, and its alleged good effects may be ascribed to stimulation of the respiratory and cardiac centres. Any therapeutic measure which can avert impending death from collapse is to be welcomed, and, doubtless, this method will be fairly and fully tried, with, we hope, the success that is anticipated. But any measure in this stage must be regarded as a desperate resort, and the therapeutic of cholera rest mainly in the direction of prophylaxis, careful selection of food, and the treatment of the premonitory diarrhoea.

With reference to the paragraph in yesterday's issue concerning the illumination of Manly by sea, it should have been stated that the works were erected by the Colonial Gasworks Company, under the supervision of Mr. Mountain Coward. The company was formed while the works were progressing, and the gasworks at Wollongong, and Winder, with their respective branches, have also been erected by the Colonial Gasworks Company.

McDermott and Bannerman, as usual, going in first, and they had made 14 between them when the stumps were drawn for the day, the Australians thus having to their credit 14 with no wickets down.

From the date of the formation of the stud flock by the late proprietor, in October, 1860, every care and attention has been bestowed to keep up the purity of the blood, evidenced by the high prices obtained for some of the stud rams, and for the wool of the London market.
